Explanations

Advance payment of child benefits

The advance payments amount is 50% of the estimated child benefits for the year and are paid in two equal payments, on February 1st and May 1st. This is a provisional payment. In the tax assessment in the end of May, the advance payments are deducted from the calculated child benefits and the remainder is paid out on June 1st and October 1st. If an overpayment has occurred, the overpaid child benefits must be repaid on June 1st. The application for advance payment must be received by the Iceland Revenue and Customs no later than 28th of February 2024. Thereafter, a request for correction must be sent through the customer service page skattur.is under the tab "Skattframtal" (Tax return) and there below "Beiðni um leiðréttingu" (Request for correction).

Marital status

When determining the advance payment of child benefits the marital status according to the National Registry at the end of the income year is taken into account.

Income

Child benefits are income-related but not property-related. When deciding on an advance payment, information from the withholding tax register on the provider's wage income is taken into account as well as the declared capital income in the last year (including rental income) and net income from business operations. Income abroad affects the calculation of child benefit in the same way as income in Iceland. If this is the case a correction must be requested.

Divorce / separation

If a couple has terminated their cohabitation before the end of the year and the dissolution of the cohabitation is a precursor to a divorce, child benefits can be calculated as for a single parent according to the tax report of the parent with whom the child is registered. If the marital status is not correctly registered in the National Registry, a certificate must be submitted from the district commissioner (sýslumaður) or the competent authorities abroad.

Unregistered cohabitation

For those individuals who live in unregistered cohabitation, which can be registered with the National Registry, the advance child benefits are calculated as for a single parent, to the individual with whom the child is registered at the end of the year. These individuals need to request a correction based on their actual marital status.

New cohabitation

For cohabiting partners who started cohabiting during the income year, child benefits are calculated as for married / cohabiting partners. If the conditions for joint taxation are not met at the end of the income year, a correction of the advance payment must be requested.

Transfer between countries

For those who did not reside in Iceland the whole year, child benefits are calculated pro rata to their time of residence in Iceland. However, this does not apply to students abroad who keep a tax residence in Iceland. See Students abroad.

Students abroad

Students who study abroad may be entitled to child benefits if their application for tax residency is approved. Tax residency applications are made with the annual tax report. Child benefits are determined according to the tax report, and in the case of a couple, information on income for both must be made available in all cases. Child benefits or similar payments abroad are deducted from child benefits. It is not possible to calculate an advance payment until information on studies, income and benefits abroad have been made available.

Child benefits for married couples and individuals in confirmed cohabitation - spouse lives abroad

At the time of final assessment, child benefits are divided equally between the couple and the same applies to the estimated advance payments. If a couple does not have the same legal residence, due to a spouse staying abroad, the child benefits are paid to the spouse/parent with whom the child is registered, provided that information is available on both incomes as well as information on child benefits or similar payments for the same children who have been paid abroad. The same rules apply to couples in confirmed cohabitation who have a dependent child.

From Act no. 90/2003 on Income tax

From section A. of article 68:

With every child under the age of 18 years old in the income year, domiciled in Iceland and dependent on persons liable to pay taxes in accordance with Article 1, the Treasury is to pay child benefits to the child's supporter. A child's supporter is the person that the child is living with and the child is dependent upon at the end of the income year. The person that pays alimony with a child is not regarded a child's supporter in this context. Married couples that are taxed in accordance with Article 62 are both regarded as supporters and the child benefit is split equally between them. The same applies to persons in cohabitation that at the end of the income year meet the conditions of paragraph 3 of Article 62, even if they have not requested to be taxed according to that Article. By the same token, those persons that maintain a household with their child shall be viewed as providers under this provision, although the conditions for registration of cohabitation are not fulfilled. In such circumstances, child benefits shall be determined in the same manner as for a married couple. In instances where only one partner in a marriage is taxable in Iceland in accordance with Article 1, that partner is to receive full child benefits for the married couple's children that are domiciled in Iceland according to the provisions that apply for married couples, provided that at hand is the relevant information about the income of both, along with information about child benefits or similar payments because of the same children that have been paid in another country.⁽¹⁾

For a child that in the income year has obtained its domicile in Iceland, child benefits are only to be paid pro rata to its time of residence in Iceland in that year. Thus the amount of child benefits and reduction due to income in accordance with paragraph 4, shall be decided proportionately to the time of residence.⁽²⁾

The child benefits are to be reduced by the amount a child's supporter has received in child benefits or similar benefits from abroad because of the child in the same income year.⁽⁵⁾

Child benefits are to be issued on the basis of a tax return when assessing taxes, as noted in Chapter X (10). Child benefits which are determined less than ISK 5.000 per provider based on the tax return are cancelled.⁽⁸⁾

...
The decision of the Tax Administration regarding the advance payment of child benefits shall be the final decision in the case at the administrative level.⁽⁶⁾
